

Course Description

ITA2220 | Intermediate Italian 1 | 4.00 credits

This comprehensive Italian language course focuses on developing students' ability to understand, speak, read, and write effectively in Italian. Through a systematic review using an integrated, multimedia approach, students will enhance their grammar, reading, and writing skills, with a strong emphasis on oral and written communication. The course aims to equip students with the necessary tools to engage confidently in public speaking and clear writing in Italian, preparing them for practical language use in various contexts. Prerequisite: ITA1121 or equivalent.

Course Competencies

Competency 1: The student will engage in interpersonal communication on a variety of topics, handling social and professional interactions by:

1. Initiating a conversation and participating in discussions, such as asking for information, details, and explanations during a conversation.
2. Giving information about activities, such as daily routines, interests and hobbies, and preferences in various time frames.
3. Asking for information during an interview.
4. Communicating about real-life situations, such as scheduling an appointment or inquiring about membership in an organization.
5. Exchanging information about work and special interest subjects.

Competency 2: The student will engage in presentational speaking on familiar topics using connected sentences by:

1. Presenting personal and social experiences, such as describing a childhood experience, reporting on a social event, and plans for the future.
2. Presenting something learned or researched, such as a current event, an academic subject, or a famous person, landmark, or cultural event in various time frames.
3. Providing personal viewpoints, such as discussing a favorite movie or song, a famous person or historical figure, and sharing reactions about a current event.

Competency 3: The student will engage in presentational writing on a wide variety of familiar topics using connected sentences by:

1. Writing messages and announcements, such as common events, daily routines, autobiographical statements, job applications, invitations, and flyers.
2. Writing short reports about something learned or researched, such as articles on current events, minutes, and debriefings.
3. Composing communication for public distribution, such as upcoming events, reviews in general, discussion forums, and some limited publication materials related to school or work.

Competency 4: The student will engage in interpretive listening related to a variety of topics on everyday life, personal interest, and studies by:

1. Analyzing basic information in ads, announcements, and other simple recordings, such as TV and radio advertisements, greetings, and movie previews.
2. Comprehending the main idea of recorded material for personal enjoyment, such as video conferences, YouTube clips, and peer-recorded descriptions.
3. Analyzing messages related to everyday life, such as voice messages and box office recordings.

Competency 5: The student will engage in interpretive reading to identify the main idea of texts related to everyday life, personal interests, or studies by:

1. Responding to questions asked on career preferences.
2. Answering personal questions in the completion of profiles.
3. Interpreting information in written announcements.

4. Reading information in ads, travel brochures, and food labels.
5. Reading updates, postings, and postcards on personal and familiar topics.

Competency 6: The student will be exposed to traditions, customs, and the arts through the use of interpersonal, presentational, and interpretive communication by:

1. Differentiating between products and practices to help gain perspectives.
2. Recognizing products related to everyday life, personal interests, or studies.
3. Interacting at a functional level in some familiar contexts.
4. Conversing with peers from the target culture in school, work, or play situations and showing interest in basic cultural similarities and differences.
5. Recognizing that significant differences and behaviors exist among cultures using appropriate learned behaviors and avoiding some social blunders.

Learning Outcomes:

- Communicate effectively using listening, speaking, reading, and writing skills
- Formulate strategies to locate, evaluate, and apply information