

Miami Dade College

InterAmerican Campus Library

Black History Month

Here is a selection of sites and information about this celebration with an annotation. For questions about this celebration or information on Black history, please visit your library or call 305-237-6236

African-American Women: Provides access to the thought, perspectives, and creative abilities of African-American women. Includes biographical, historical, and personal narratives. This mega site links to the best websites for researchers or casual readers.

Afro-American Almanac: This site presents a historical perspective of a nation, its people, and its cultural evolution. Included are biographies, full-text books, folk tales, documents, and information about historic events. Links to multiple resources. Recommended by the History Channel.

American Slave Narratives - An Online Anthology: This site presents a sampling of some of the interviews given to over 2,300 former slaves from across the American South by writers and journalists under the aegis of the Works Progress Administration. These former slaves provided first-hand accounts of their experiences on plantations, in cities, and on small farms.

Black Facts Online: A searchable database of historical events, experiences, and achievements of African-Americans. Individuals may search by date or by keyword

Black History Museum: Here are online exhibits on specific topics in Black History, including the Tuskegee Airmen, Slavery, the Black Panther Party, and Black Soldiers in World War II, among others

Faces of Science African-Americans in the Sciences: This site profiles African-American men and women who have contributed to the advancement of science and engineering. Individuals are indexed by profession and alphabetically. Also includes a list of the first Africans-Americans who earned doctoral degrees and lists inventors.

Malcolm X: A Research Site: This website is a comprehensive listing of information covering the life and ideology of Malcolm X. Included are a chronology, family history, words both spoken and written, and lists of books and Websites for further study.

Our Shared History - African-American Heritage: The Nation Park Service presents sites related to African-American heritage and history. These sites vary widely, including detailed travel guides, information on the Underground Railroad, ways to find African-American ancestors who fought in the Civil War, and much more.

We Shall Overcome - Historic Places of the Civil Rights Movement: Presented by the National Park Service, this site describes historic places important in the Civil Rights Movement, and provides an itinerary map for those wishing to undertake an historic tour.