

Hypothetical Situations

1. You are working for “Hershey’s” Chocolate Co. You deal with 50 gallon tubs of liquid chocolate; it’s your first month on the job. One night you forget to set the rat traps and when pouring the chocolate, you notice pieces of rat brains and bones. This could cost your company thousands. What do you do?
 - I would scoop out the rat pieces and pour them into the trash, stating that I saw a hair floating in the mix.
2. It is your birthday and your friends were planning a surprise party. When you get home, you find all your friends dead, wearing party hats next to a pile of presents. Suddenly ... the lights go out! What do you do?
 - I would drop whatever I was holding at the time and begin running back out the door hoping not to fall down or knock my head against something as it happens in most horror flicks.
3. You become secretly addicted to an unknown substance in your cabinet. When undergoing unbearable withdrawals you pull your hair and scream as you notice that your supply is running out. What do you do?
 - I would drink some alcohol and smoke some marijuana in an effort to distill the effects of the substance. If that didn’t work, I would scream until I fell asleep.
4. You are at a hip-hop club and you’re “dressed for success.” A couple of hours after you began dancing, you realize that your shirt is ripped and there is toilet paper stuck to your shoe full of shit. The crowd surrounds you and breaks into laughter. What do you do?
 - I would take the toilet paper off my shoe and start a new dance, swinging it wildly over my head like a lasso; then I would let it go and watch it land on the terrified face of some girl who had just been pointing and laughing at me.
5. What would you do if you were at a fancy bar (for some odd reason) and a beautiful, well spoken man bought you several drinks. Then you realize, after a couple of hours of conversation, that you two have a lot in common, and at the end of the night he invites you to move with him to Spain promising you financial security.
 - I would agree to go to Spain, since I already have some family up there, and see how it goes.

By Jennifer Peña