

Watching

The birds spit
over the land
that stretches
over their soft
soil, as they
sing of pompous
morons erect
on two feet,
who build
with fresh
wood, cut so
precisely with their opposing thumbs, and
attitudes spit
by their
lashing tongues.

By Candice Anderson