

have beak noses, likeness for Shakespeare and in some way they fear oppression from the external world. Their thoughts are alike and this decreases the line between what is sanity and madness.

In the end, the news of the death of Septimus made Clarissa a bit uncomfortable. Septimus decided to get away from his problems by simple suicide. Her friend Sally was always a more of a free spirit and she showed confusion for the way of life Clarissa has taken. Mr. Peter was very unpredictable and his critical behavior distanced him from the people, he values himself though. Richard is a very comprehensible husband who loves her wife and daughter. Mrs. Dalloway finally accepts the way her life is, partly because of the reflection of the death of Septimus.