In March, artist Jean Marc Calvet was the subject of a documentary screened at the Miami International Film Festival that recounted his extraordinary life from street urchin to bodyguard, mobster to drug addict.

Today, the French-born Calvet, who lives in Nicaragua, is a painter whose work Miami Juice has been selected as the official poster for the 30th edition of the festival, to be held March 1-10, 2013.

“This is primarily a message of hope ... go out of the dark and into the light!” Calvet, 46, said about the painting via a press release issued Thursday evening by Miami Dade College, which presents the festival. “The central personage is filled with cinematic references: projectors, stars, cameras, red carpet, outlaws, explosions, etc.”

Executive director Jaie Laplante said Calvet’s painting is a perfect representation of the theme of next year’s anniversary festival: “Every character under the sun.”

“Jean Marc has captured our emotions and anticipations as we complete our third decade and look forward with excitement to our fourth.”
